

“Play-Off Championship” Series

The schedules for most Negro League seasons were played in two halves with a winner being declared for each half of the season. If different teams each won one half of the season or if the season ended in a dispute over who should be crowned the “league” champion, a Play-Off Series was held.

It is important not to confuse a Play-Off Series with a Colored Championship Series or the Negro League World Series. The Play-Off Series was played between teams from the same formalized league. Many if not most Colored Championship Series were played between two self appointed teams, while the Negro League World Series was played against the champions from two different formalized leagues. From 1924 to 1927 the Negro League World Series was a post season championship series that was played between the Negro National League champions and the Eastern Colored League (ECL) champions. Then in latter years, there was also a Negro League World Series played from 1942 to 1948 when the champions of the Negro American League (NAL) met the champions of the Negro National League (NNL).

1925 Kansas City Monarchs vs St. Louis Stars (Negro National League)

After the 1925 regular Negro National League season, the Kansas City Monarchs, winners of the first half of the season, met the St. Louis Stars, winners of the second half of the season, in a Play-Off Series to determine which team would be crowned the Negro National League champion.

The Kansas City Monarchs finished the regular season with a record of 62-23 (.729) which was the best record in the Negro National League for the entire season. The Monarchs were led by the hitting of Wilber “Bullet” Rogan (.374), Hurley Mc Nair (.365), Newt Joseph (.335), Walter “Dobie” Moore (.333) and Newt Allen (.307). Even with six starters in the line-up hitting over .300 for the season, the real strength of the Monarchs team was their pitching staff. Kansas City boasted the following starting rotation for the 1925 season: Wilber “Bullet” Rogan (20-2), Nelson Dean (11-3), William Bell (10-3) and Bill Drake (10-4). Bullet Rogan was considered the best pitcher in Negro League baseball in 1925.

The St. Louis Stars finished the season with a record of 71-27 (.724). Candy Jim Taylor (Manager of the St. Louis Stars) had a starting lineup in which all but one of the starters hit over .300 for the season.

The St. Louis Stars also had an excellent pitching staff that included Roosevelt Davis (17-3), Percy Miller (12-2), Logan “Slap” Hensley (11-3) and William Ross (11-7).

The first three games of the series were played in St. Louis. Game one was played on September 19th. The Monarchs took game one by a score of 8-6. Kansas City was paced by three homeruns hit by Newt Allen, Frank Duncan and Dobie Moore. Bullet Rogan picked up the win in game one for the Monarchs and Slap Hensley took the loss for St. Louis. The St. Louis Stars rebounded and took games two and three by the scores of 6-3 and 3-2. The series was moved to Chicago for the final four games. Bullet Rogan opened the series in Chicago on September 26th win a 5-4 victory over the Stars. In the game Rogan collected four hits and drove in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning. The St. Louis Stars came back in game five with a tough 2-1 victory to take a one game lead in the series. With a must win situation in game six, William Bell pitched the Monarchs to a 9-3 victory to even the series at three games apiece. Jose Mendez (Manager of the Kansas City Monarchs) sent Bullet Rogan to the mound for his third start of the series. Rogan did not disappoint and pitched a 4-0 shut out for the win and the Negro National League championship title.

The Kansas City Monarchs and St. Louis Stars played two more games against each other after the series. These two games did not count in the Play-Off Series for the Negro National League title. William Bell (Kansas City Monarchs) won the first game 9-3 and Bullet Rogan (Kansas City) won the second game 3-0.

Negro League National League Champion (1925) – Kansas City Monarchs

1926 Kansas City Monarchs vs Chicago American Giants (Negro National League)

The 1926 Negro National League season was hotly contested between the Kansas City Monarchs who won the first half of the season and the Chicago American Giants who won the second half of the season. The Kansas City Monarchs finished the season with the best record in the Negro National League. The Monarchs were 57-21 (.731) and the Chicago American Giants were 57-23 (.713) during the regular season. The two teams met in mid September to decide who would be crowned the Negro National League champion and play the Atlantic City Bacharach Giants (Eastern Colored League champion) in the Negro League World Series.

Jose Mendez managed the Monarchs and had both a strong hitting team and excellent pitching. The Kansas City Monarchs were led by the hitting of Tom Young (.394), Walter "Dobie" Moore (.390), Cristobal Torriente (.371), Bullet Rogan (.329) and Wade Johnston (.292). William Bell (19-4), Chet Brewer (14-1) and Bullet Rogan (14-4) were the team's top pitchers.

The Chicago American Giants were managed by Rube Foster and Dave Malarcher. Even though Chicago did not have as strong a hitting team as Kansas City, they did have four starters who hit over .300 for the season. The leading hitters for the American Giants were Jim Brown (.333), Jelly Gardner (.329), Johnny Hines (.328) and Sandy Thompson (.312). Webster McDonald (11-4), Bill Foster (11-5), George Harney (11-6) and Rub Currie (8-4) anchored the Chicago pitching staff.

The first four games of the series were played in Kansas City. Game was played on September 18th. The Kansas City Monarchs got off to a fast start in the series by winning the first three games by scores of 4-3, 6-5 and 5-0. Bullet Rogan was the pitching star for Kansas City by posting wins in the first two games. Rube Currie (Chicago) took the mound against Jose Mendez (Kansas City) in game four which was a must win for the American Giants. Currie pitched a good game and hit a game winning two run double in the eighth inning to secure the victory for Chicago. The series was moved to Chicago for game five. Bullet Rogan (Kansas City) faced Bill Foster (Chicago) in a duel of two of the best pitchers in the Negro National League. A six run fourth inning drove Foster from the mound and led to an 11-5 victory for the Monarchs. The Kansas City Monarchs now had a lead of four games to one and only needed one more victory to clinch the pennant.

In one of the most dramatic comeback in the history of post season play, the Chicago American Giants won the final four games of the series. Rube Currie shut out the Monarchs in game six by a score of 2-0. The American Giants rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning of game seven for a 4-3 victory. Games eight and nine (if necessary) were scheduled as a double header on September 29th. Game eight pitted Bullet Rogan against Bill Foster. Both pitchers turned in brilliant pitching performances. Chicago prevailed with a 1-0 victory with the lone run being scored in the bottom of the ninth inning with two outs. Ironically both pitchers went back on the mound to pitch their second game in the same day. Bill Foster pitched his second straight shutout of the day and beat the Monarchs 5-0 for the Negro National League title.

Negro League National League Champion (1926) – Chicago American Giants

1927 Chicago American Giants vs Birmingham Black Barons

(Negro National League)

The Chicago American Giants won the first half of the Negro National League season and the Birmingham Black Barons behind the play of rookies Roy “Red” Parnell (outfield) Satchel Paige (pitcher) came on strong to win the second half of the season. Chicago had the best record in the Negro National League for the season. The American Giants posted a won-loss record of 63-30 (.677). The Birmingham Black Barons finished the season with a 55-43 (.561) record. The Black Baron’s record was only good enough for fourth place in the league, but their performance for the second half of the season gave them the second half title.

The Chicago American Giants were led by the hitting of Walter “Steel Arm” Davis (.385), Pythian Russ (.350), Nat Rogers (.342) and Larry Brown (.316). The American Giants pitching staff included Bill Foster (21-3), Webster McDonald (10-5) and Willie Powell (9-4). Dave Malarcher managed the Chicago American Giants.

The Birmingham Black Barons had five hitters who hit over .300 for the season. Red Parnell (.429), Sam Streeter (.381), Willie Owens (.310), Clarence “Spoony” Palm (.304) and George McAllister (.300) were the team’s top hitters. Harry Salmon (14-6), Sam Streeter (14-12), Bob Poindexter (10-12) and Satchel Paige (8-4) were the nucleus of the Black Baron’s pitching staff.

Game one of the Play-Off Series was played in Birmingham on September 20th. Bill Foster the ace of the Chicago pitching staff pitched a five hit shut out for a 5-0 victory. In game two Chicago scored six runs in the top of the eighth inning to secure a 10-5 win. Steel Arm Davis and Pythian Russ both hit homeruns in game two. Game three was played in Chicago on September 25th. Bill Foster posted his second win of the series with a 6-4 victory. Willie Powell (Chicago) pitched game four and closed out the series with a 6-2 win.

The Black Barons hitters were totally shut down in the series. Birmingham hitters went 18 for 98 for a .183 team batting average. Red Parnell who was the leading hitter in the Negro National League with a .429 batting average during the regular season could only manage two hits in sixteen plate appearances for a .125 batting average for the series. If weak hitting wasn't bad enough, Birmingham pitchers couldn't contain the Chicago American Giants hitters. The Chicago American Giants hitters went 39 for 120 for a .325 team batting average for the series.

Negro League National League Champion (1927) – Chicago American Giants

1928 Chicago American Giants vs St. Louis Stars (Negro National League)

The St. Louis Stars won the first half of the 1928 Negro National League season and the Chicago American Giants won the second half of the season by barely beating out the Kansas City Monarchs. St. Louis finished the regular season with a 66-26 (.717) record and Chicago had a regular season record of 54-37 (.593). They met in late September to decide which team would be the champions of the Negro National League.

St. Louis under manager Candy Jim Taylor dominated play in the Negro National League during the regular season with both strong hitting and excellent pitching. The Stars line-up did not have a weak spot at the plate. St. Louis was led by future National Baseball Hall of Fame players James “Cool Pappa” Bell, George “Mule” Suttles and Willie Wells. Seven of the nine starting St. Louis players had batting averages over .300 for the 1928 season.

The St. Louis Stars also featured a strong pitching staff that included: Ted Trent (21-2), Logan “Slap” Hensley (13-5), Roosevelt Davis (11-1) and Luther McDonald (11-6). Ted Trent was the leading pitcher in the Negro National League during the 1928 season.

Dave Malarcher managed the Chicago American Giants. The leading hitters for Chicago were Pythian Russ (.405), Walter “Steel Arm” Davis (.353), Reuben Jones (.333), Buck Miller (.306), Johnny Hines (.303) and Sanford Jackson (.301). Pythian Russ won the Negro National League batting title in 1928. Chicago had basically the same starting rotation in 1928 as they had on their 1927 championship team. The American Giants pitching staff included Bill Foster (14-10), George Harney (10-5), Willie Powell (10-9) and Harold Treadwell (6-5).

The 1928 Play-Off Series began on September 22nd in Chicago. The first four games were played in Chicago before the series moved to St. Louis for games five through nine.

Chicago won the first two games by the scores of 7-3 and 3-0. Bill Foster picked up the victory for the American Giants in game one and Willie Powell shut out the Stars for the win in game two. St. Louis won games three and four by the scores of 6-4 and 5-4. The series was tied at two games apiece when the series moved to St. Louis. Bill Foster (Chicago) faced off against Slap Hensley (St. Louis) in the opening game (game five) in St. Louis. Pythian Russ broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the eighth inning with a solo homerun as the American Giants went on to win the game by a score of 5-3. Game six of the series was a real slugfest with the Stars prevailing by a score of 12-7. St. Louis collected twelve hits in the game and Chicago banded out ten. The victory by St. Louis in game six tied the series at three games apiece. The Chicago American Giants regained control of the series with a 9-7 victory in game seven. St. Louis tied the series up again by taking game eight. Game nine featured each team’s ace pitcher. Bill Foster started for Chicago and Ted Trent for St. Louis. Willie Wells (St. Louis) was the hero of the game with two homeruns as he led the Stars to a 9-2 and the Negro National League championship title.
